"Oh, if you love me, say so." Your mouth is like a rose bud, love,
With rows of pearl adorning;
Your breath is like the sweet perfume
Of a fair summer morning;
But as I gaze upon your charms,
My trembling heart does ache so;
I can but still the words repeat—
""Oh, if you love me, say so."

The fragrant roses, as you pass,
Though in their bloom and beauty;
Within their petals shrink and gaze,
And deem it but their duty; For they are envious of your charms,— Then why do you delay so? Oh, why not banish all my fears, And if you love me, say so?

THE WORKINGMEN.

The noblest men I know on earth, [toil.

Are men whose hands are browned with
Who backed by no ancestral graves,
Hew down the wood and till the soil; And win thereby a prouder fame, Than follows kings or warrior's name.

The working men, wnate'er their task,
To carve the stone or bear the hod,
They wear upon their hones' brows,
The royal seal and stamp of God!
And brighter are their drops of sweat,
Than diamonds in a coronet.

God bless the noble working-men Who rear the cities of the plain;
Who dig the mines and build the ships,
And drive the commerce of the main;
God bless them: for their swarthy hands
Have wrought the glory of all lands.
